

The Bruce Daigrepoint Cajun Band

Comprised of accordion, fiddle and a tight rhythm section, The Bruce Daigrepoint Cajun Band mixes traditional Louisiana French music with original Cajun and Zydeco material. Both New Orleans natives and tourists alike catch Bruce and his band at the legendary Tipitina's for the Sunday evening fais do do, a tradition since 1986.

In addition to playing statewide festivals in his native Louisiana, Bruce has appeared throughout the country, from the New York Lincoln Center to the Live Oak Fest in Santa Barbara, California.

Bruce, who describes his style of music as "new traditional Cajun," is an international favorite who has toured Canada, Europe and South America. His album Stir up the Roux topped the critic's poll of Germany's Tip Berlin Magazin, while Couer des Cajuns landed a Top Ten spot among Craponne, France country radio listeners -- placing him with the likes of Garth Brooks, Wynonna and Tanya Tucker.

As a songwriter, Bruce is recognized as an innovator. He has been honored time and again by the Cajun French Music Association for his song writing as well as his professionalism as a musician. Cover versions of his original compositions are favorites with French-language bands; a Danish cover of his anthem Acadie de la Louisiane topped the charts in Denmark.

His CDs have been well received by the Cajun music audiences everywhere.
